Coaching Philosophy and Approach

People, teams, and entire organizations perform better when they invest in the fulfillment of everyone involved. But knowing what is truly satisfying and finding our ways to those outcomes requires ongoing inquiry and conscious commitment. It also requires a set of skills and awarenesses that many people find challenging. I believe that cooperation and collaboration are the foundation of all highly functioning groups. It is essential for the individuals who comprise those groups to continually expand their capacity for empathy and curiosity. As coaches, it is our role to support individuals in developing their capacities for fulfilling participation and productive contribution to any system to which they belong.
